

ABSTRACT

A method for preventing unauthorized persons from entering and using a computer facility includes storing the fingerprints of authorized persons in a control center or in a processor unit, detecting and comparing a fingerprint of a detected person to enter into the computer facility with the stored fingerprints to determine whether the detected fingerprint matches the stored fingerprints or not. The person is permitted to enter into the computer facility when the fingerprint matches with the stored fingerprints and/or the passwords matches with the stored passwords.

00000001.11301